

Developing a social media marketing campaign can be a great way to improve engagement for Thefoozie. This would involve creating content such as videos, images, and blog posts that showcase the benefits of the product as well as providing informative and entertaining content that customers may find interesting. Additionally, social media campaigns can be targeted to the specific target audience of the product for example slumber parties' content would be great content and a great target audience based on the perfect age group. A blog post could also feature customer photos of themselves wearing the slipper socks in different settings, and provide styling tips and advice. This would give customers the visual inspiration they need to purchase the products and drive engagement with the brand.

Campaign/Sale Offer: Thefoozie will offer 15% off all foozie socks during its Father's Day Sale.

Channels used to promote the campaign: The campaign will be promoted through the company's website, social media accounts (Facebook, Instagram, Twitter, YouTube), and email campaigns.

Promotion of the campaign will involve posting content that emphasizes Father's Day and online shopping discounts, with a focus on creating compelling visuals to capture the reader's attention.

Key Messaging: Treat dad and his feet to cozy slipper socks from Thefoozie this Father's Day!

Measurement of Campaign Success: The success of the campaign will be measured based on traffic to the website, amount of sales during the Father's Day Sale, and engagement rates on social media channels.
